PREFACE.

THE purpose of this enlarged and revised edition of the "Supplementary Composition" is in part the same as that of the original volume; namely, to provide a series of concise and systematic grammatical tests for students who have completed the work of some standard composition book. The Grammatical Introduction and Part I (Isolated Sentences) are designed to meet this need.

The division of Part I into exercises is one of convenience merely. The real units are the six sections into which the exercises are grouped, the student being given in each section an opportunity to illustrate, at least once, all the points outlined in the Grammatical Introduction. The six sections, therefore, provide six separate and complete examinations on the essential principles of Latin syntax. The order in which the principles occur varies from section to section, as does also the guise in which they appear, the aim being to throw the student upon his own responsibility as much as possible, and to lead him to recognize the constructions when and wherever found. If, as he finishes one section, he be required to master the points on which he has failed, the quality of his work should improve in the succeeding sections.

The sentences which make up the exercises of Part I are in general based closely upon the orations and philosophical works of Cicero. Where it has seemed necessary, a reference to the Grammatical Introduction has been given. The suggestions of the footnotes on points of vocabulary should be followed, for the principle to be illustrated sometimes turns upon the use of the word suggested.

Part II, which contains forty exercises in connected discourse, is the distinctly new feature of the present volume. These exercises are so arranged as to give a coherent account of the life of Catiline, beginning with his birth in 108 and running on to his death in 62. The writer has observed that the average student brings to college very hazy and incorrect notions regarding the conspiracy of Catiline, and it is hoped that Part II will, among other things, help to remedy this state of affairs. The account of Catiline's life here given is drawn from the various original sources, and is therefore not based upon any particular author or text. At the same time, the vocabulary is largely the old familiar one of Cicero's orations.

In their grammatical content the exercises of Part II are designed to provide a helpful preparation for the composition work offered in the larger colleges and universities during the freshman year. This general plan has found instant favor with the Latin teachers to whom it has been broached, and it is hoped that it may prove equally acceptable to those to whom it is now for the first time presented.

With the addition of these exercises in continuous narrative, this manual will meet a variety of needs. If a strict grammatical review is all that is desired, the six sections of Part I may be used. On the other hand, a class strong in grammar might with profit confine its attention to the continuous discourse of Part II. Or again, since each section of Part I is complete in itself, one or two sections may be used as a rapid grammatical review, the rest of the year being spent on the work of Part II.

I would here again express my obligation to Professor C. E. Bennett of Cornell for his suggestions regarding the Grammatical Introduction made when the book first appeared. In the work of revision I have found very helpful the suggestions of friends who have used the earlier edition, and for these grateful acknowledgment is here made.

GRAMMATICAL INTRODUCTION.

SYNTAX OF THE CASES.

[In the Exercises, reference is made to the Grammatical Introduction according to the marginal figures at the right.]

I. Accusative Case.

1. Extent of Time and Space. (1)

This construction occurs also with the participle nātus in stating a person's age.

B. 181; A. 423-425; G. 334 ff.; H. 417.

2. Double Accusative. (2)

With verbs of teaching (docēre), asking and demanding (rogāre, poscere), and concealing (cēlāre). In the passive, the accusative of the person becomes the subject, and the accusative of the thing is retained. Note, however, that instead of a second accusative, petere takes ab, and quaerere ab, dē, or ex, and the ablative of the person. This prepositional construction occurs also with poscere, postulāre, and flāgilāre.

B. 178; A. 396; G. 339; H. 411.

3. Accusative of Result Produced (in its use as Cognate Accusative). (3)

Here there are two important varieties; the accusative may repeat the verb idea, e.g. tūtam vītam vivere, or it may be a colorless pronoun or adjective which gains its specific meaning from the verb, e.g. multa errāre, 'to make many mistakes.'

B. 176. 2 and 4; A. 390 and c; G. 333;
H. 409.

4. Accusative of Exclamation. (4)

B. 183; A. 397. d; G. 343. 1; H. 421.

II. Dative Case.

1. Indirect Object.

(a) With transitive verbs. (5)

B. 187. I; A. 362; G. 345; H. 424.

(b) With intransitive verbs. (6)

Such as are translated 'to favor, help, please,' etc. But some verbs so translated take the accusative, notably iuvāre, adiuvāre, laedere, and dēlectāre.

B. 187. II. a and n.; A. 367; G. 346 and n. 3; H. 426.

(a) Impersonal construction in the passive, and dative retained. (7)

B. 187. II. b; A. 372; G. 346. n. 1; H. 426. 3.

(c) With verbs compounded with ad, ante, con, etc. (8)

These may be either transitive (as antepōnere), or intransitive (as subvenire). Note, however, that some such compounds (as cōservāre) cannot take an indirect object; to apply the rule correctly it is necessary to know the verbs individually.

B. 187. III; A. 370 and b; G. 347, and cf. 331; H. 429.

2. Dative of Reference. (9)
 B. 188. I; A. 376; G. 350 ff.; H. 425. 2.
- (a) With verbs expressing separation. (10)
 The dative regularly refers to a person rather than to a thing.
 B. 188. 2. d; A. 381; G. 347. R. 5; H. 429. 2.
3. Dative of Possessor. (11)
 B. 190; A. 373; G. 349; H. 430.
4. Dative of the Agent. (12)
 Used regularly with the gerundive; sometimes with the compound tenses of the passive voice.
 B. 189; A. 374-375; G. 354-355; H. 431.
- (a) Direct agency expressed also by the ablative with ab. (13)
 B. 216; A. 405; G. 401; H. 468.
- (b) Intermediate agency expressed by the accusative with per, or by a genitive or possessive with operā. (14)
 A. 405. b; G. 401; H. 468. 3.
5. Dative of Service and Purpose. (15)
 This dative is usually the singular of an abstract noun, and is often accompanied by a dative of the person.
 B. 191; A. 382; G. 356; H. 433.
6. Dative with adjectives denoting fitness, nearness, likeness, etc. (16)
 B. 192; A. 384; G. 359; H. 434.

III. Genitive Case.

1. Genitive with Nouns.

(a) Possessive Genitive.

(a) Meus, tuus, etc., used instead of the possessive genitive of personal and reflexive pronouns. (17

A. 343. a; G. 362. R. 1; H. 440. 1. N. 2.

(β) Possessive genitive in the predicate when the subject of the sentence is an infinitive. (18

B. 198. 3; A. 343. c; G. 366. R. 2; H. 439. 5.

(b) Genitive of Quality or Characteristic. (19

Requires a modifier, and may stand in the predicate. It usually denotes permanent and essential characteristics, and is used always in references to number, measure, time, and space.

B. 203. 1 and 2; A. 345; G. 365; H. 440. 3.

(c) Genitive of the Whole (Partitive Genitive). (20

B. 201; A. 346; G. 367; H. 441.

(a) Nostrum and vestrum, genitives of the whole; nostrī and vestrī, meī, tui, sui, objective genitives. (21

B. 242. 2; A. 143. b and c; G. 364. R. and N. 2; H. 175. 2.

2. Genitive with Adjectives. (22

Mostly objective; sometimes of reference (specification).

B. 204; A. 349; G. 374; H. 450.

(a) With similis. (23)

Genitive used commonly when the reference is to living objects; both genitive and dative of inanimate things.

B. 204. 3; A. 385. c. 2; G. 359. N. 4; H. 435.
4. N.

3. Genitive with Verbs.

(a) Genitive of Value and Price. (24)

With verbs of buying the use is restricted to tantū, quantū, plūris, and minōris. Other expressions of price are in the ablative. But with verbs of valuing more genitives are used, as parvū, māgnū, etc.

B. 203. 3 and 4; A. 417 and c; G. 379;
H. 448. 1.

(b) With verbs of remembering and forgetting. (25)

(α) Personal and reflexive pronouns regularly in genitive.

(β) Other references to persons in genitive with oblīvīscī; in the accusative with memīnisse, except when used in the sense 'be mindful of.'

(γ) References to things in either genitive or accusative; but neuter pronouns regularly in the accusative.

B. 206; A. 350; G. 376; H. 454.

(c) With verbs of judicial action. (26)

The ablative, too, is used of the penalty; regularly when this is a fine of definite amount.

B. 208; A. 352, 353. 1; G. 378; H. 456.

- (d) With impersonal verbs (miseret, etc.). (27)

B. 209; A. 354. b; G. 377; H. 457.

- (e) With interest (and rēfert). (28)

Referring to the first or second person, either verb is used with meā, tuā, etc. So also with the reflexive suā; but in other references to the third person interest is used with the genitive.

B. 211; A. 355; G. 381; H. 449.

IV. Ablative Case.

1. Ablative of Separation. (29)

(α) Verbs of freeing, depriving, or lacking, usually without a preposition.

(β) Other verbs may be used with ab, dē, or ex; regularly so when the ablative denotes a person, and often when the verb is compounded with ab, dē, dis, ex, or sē.

B. 214; A. 400–402; G. 390; H. 461.

2. Ablative of Source. (30)

B. 215; A. 403; cf. G. 395; H. 467.

3. Ablative with a comparative. (31)

Allowed when the first term of the comparison is a nominative or accusative, and required in sweeping negations and questions equivalent thereto. With other cases than the nominative and accusative the quam-construction must be used.

B. 217; A. 406; G. 398; H. 471.

4. Ablative of Accompaniment. (32)

Cum is regularly used with this ablative, but may be omitted in military phrases when the noun is modified by some adjective other than a numeral.

B. 222; A. 413; G. 392; H. 473. 1.

5. Ablative of Quality or Characteristic. (33)

Requires a modifier. Often not to be distinguished in meaning from the corresponding use of the genitive; but employed regularly in references to bodily characteristics, and preferred when the modifier is pār or any adjective in -is.

B. 224; A. 415; G. 400; H. 473. 2.

6. Ablative of Manner and of Attendant Circumstance. (34)

Cum is required if the noun has no attribute; otherwise it is optional. 'Manner' is differentiated from 'Attendant Circumstance' by the fact that it is regularly restricted to abstract words, e.g. celeritāte, virtūte, etc.

B. 220-221; A. 412; G. 399; H. 473. 3.

7. Ablative of Cause. (35)

B. 219; A. 404; G. 408; H. 475.

(a) With gaudēre, laetārī, maerēre, etc. (36)

B. 219. 1; A. 431; G. 408; H. 475.

8. Ablative of Means. (37)

B. 218; A. 409; G. 401; H. 476.

(a) With ūtor, fruor, etc. (38)

B. 218. 1; A. 410 and N.; G. 407; H. 477. I.

- (b) With opus (rarely usus). (39)
B. 218. 2; A. 411; G. 406; H. 477. III.
- (c) With verbs of abounding and filling, and with adjectives of plenty. (40)
But plēnus more often takes the genitive.
B. 218. 8; A. 409. a; G. 405; H. 477. II.
- (d) Ablative of Price. (41)
Under this heading are included māgnō, plūrimō, parvō, and minimō, which express Indefinite Price.
B. 225; A. 416; G. 404; H. 478.
- (e) With contentus, frētus, and praeditus. (42)
B. 218. 3; A. 431. a; G. 401. N. 6; H. 476. 1.
9. Ablative of Degree of Difference. (43)
B. 223; A. 414; G. 403; H. 479.
10. Ablative of Specification. (44)
B. 226; A. 418; G. 397; H. 480.
- (a) With dignus and indignus. (45)
B. 226. 2; A. 418. b; G. 397. N. 2; H. 481.
- (b) Supines in -ū. (46)
B. 340. 2; A. 510; G. 436; H. 635.
11. Ablative of Place Where. (47)
Preposition is not required when the noun is modified by such adjectives as tōtus, omnis, etc.,

and in certain set expressions, as terrā marīque; so also locū and parte, especially when modified.

B. 228; A. 426-429. 2; G. 385-388; H. 483, 485. 1 and 2.

(a) Locative. (48)

Regularly of names of towns and small islands; so domī, rūrī, and humī.

B. 232; A. 427. 3; G. 411; H. 482 ff.

12. Ablative of Time When and Within Which. (49)

B. 230-231; A. 423; G. 393; H. 486.

(a) Dating. (50)

If the English date coincides with the Calends, Nones, or Ides, the Ablative of Time When is used. If it falls on the day before any of these, pridiē (pr.) is prefixed to the accusative. Other dates are reckoned as 'so many days before the Calends,' etc., and are commonly written in an abbreviated form; e.g. VIII Kal. Oct. After finding the real number of days between the date in question and the Calends, Nones, or Ides, it is necessary to add one day, for the Romans counted the day at both ends of a period of time. It should be noted also that the Calends are the first day of the month following that in which the date falls; i.e. for purposes of dating, June 1, for instance, is May 32.

B. 371; A. 631; G. Appendix; H. 754.

13. Ablative Absolute. (51)

B. 227; A. 419; G. 409; H. 489.

V. Motion to and from towns and small islands; also domus and rūs.

1. Limit of Motion. (52)

'Into the neighborhood of' may be expressed by ad and the accusative.

B. 182; A. 427. 2, 428. a; G. 337; H. 418-419.

2. Motion From. (53)

B. 229. 1; A. 427. 1; G. 391; H. 462 and 4.

SYNTAX OF THE VERB.

I. Subjunctive in Independent Sentences.

1. Non-interrogative.

(a) Volitive Subjunctive (in its hortatory, jussive, and concessive uses). (54)

B. 274-275; A. 439; G. 263; H. 559.

(b) Optative Subjunctive. (55)

The present tense refers to the future; the imperfect expresses a regret that something is or is not, the pluperfect, that it was or was not; with these latter tenses utinam may not be omitted.

B. 279; A. 441; G. 260-261; H. 558.

(c) Potential Subjunctive. (56)

Note especially this use in verbs of perception whose subject is the indefinite second singular.

B. 280; A. 445 ff.; G. 257-258; H. 552-556.

2. Interrogative.

- (a) In deliberative questions. (57)

B. 277; A. 444; G. 265; H. 559. 4.

- (b) In repudiating or rejecting questions.* (58)

These reject the will or thought of another concerning the speaker's action; less often the speaker rejects such will or thought directed upon some one else.

B. 277; A. 444. a; G. 259, 558; H. 559. 5.

II. Prohibitions. (59)

- (a)
- nōlī*
- and
- nōlite*
- with infinitive.

- (β)
- cavē*
- (
- nē*
-) and subjunctive.

B. 276; A. 450; G. 271; H. 561.

III. Substantive Clauses.

1. Of Result. (60)

With verbs of bringing to pass, happening, and following.

B. 297; A. 568; G. 553; H. 571.

2. Developed from the Volitive.

- (a) With verbs of hindering, preventing, etc. (61)

The conjunctions are quīn, quōminus, and nē. Quīn is used only after negative sentences or questions equivalent thereto.

B. 295. 3 A. 558 and b; G. 549, 554-555; H. 568. 8, 595. 2, 596. 2.

* Some grammars make 58 a subordinate class of 57.

- (b) With verbs of admonishing, commanding, etc. (Substantive Purpose). (62 a)

B. 295; A. 563; G. 546; H. 565.

3. Developed from the Optative.

- (a) With verbs of wishing and desiring (Substantive Purpose). (62 b)

B. 296. 1; A. 563; G. 546; H. 565.

- (b) With verbs of fearing. (63)

Nē nōn (rather than ut) is used after negative expressions and questions equivalent thereto.

B. 296. 2; A. 564; G. 550; H. 567.

IV. Purpose and Result.

1. Purpose.

- (a) Ut, nē, quōd, and quī with the subjunctive. (64)

Quōd replaces ut when there is a comparative in the purpose clause. The present and the imperfect are the tenses regularly employed in purpose clauses.

B. 282; A. 529–531; G. 543. 3, 545; H. 568.

- (b) Supine in -um with verbs of motion. (65)

B. 340. 1; A. 509; G. 435; H. 633.

- (c) Gerundive and Gerund. (66)

Accusative with ad, and the genitive with causā or grātiā. The gerundive of transitive verbs should be used, the gerund of intransitive.

B. 338–339; A. 533; G. 544. R. 2; H. 626–3, 628.

2. Result (67)

Ut, ut nōn, and quī with the subjunctive.

B. 284; A. 536–537; G. 552; H. 570.

V. Conditional Sentences.

1. Nothing implied as to the reality of the supposed case (Simple or Logical Conditions). (68)

B. 302; A. 515–516; G. 595; H. 574.

(a) Subjunctive of the present or perfect in protasis when the subject of the verb is the indefinite second singular. (69)

B. 302. 2; A. 518. a; G. 595. R. 3; H. 578. 2.

2. Supposed case represented as contingent (Less Vivid Future or Ideal Conditions). (70)

These differ from those under (1) as 'If I should do' differs from 'If I (shall) do' in English.

B. 303; A. 516. 2; G. 596; H. 576.

3. Supposed case represented as contrary to fact (Unreal Conditions). (71)

B. 304; A. 517; G. 597; H. 579.

VI. Concessive Clauses.

1. Conceding a fact.

(a) Quamquam, etsi, etc., with indicative. (72)

B. 309. 2; A. 527. c and d; G. 604–605;
H. 586. I.

- (b) Cum with subjunctive. (73

B. 309. 3; A. 549; G. 587; H. 598.

2. Conceding a possibility.

- (a) Quamvis, licet, ut, and nē with subjunctive. (74

B. 309. 1 and 4; A. 527. a and b; G. 606–608; H. 586. II.

VII. Causal Constructions.

1. Cum with subjunctive. (75

B. 286. 2; A. 549; G. 586; H. 598.

2. Quod, quia, and quoniam with indicative and subjunctive. (76

The indicative should be used when the speaker is willing to vouch for the reason, whatever the source of his information. If he wishes to disclaim responsibility for the truth of the statement, the subjunctive is to be used. The subjunctive clause may be represented in English by 'because, as he said,' 'because, as it was said,' etc.

B. 286. 1; A. 540; G. 539 ff.; H. 588. I and II.

VIII. Time Relations.

1. Postquam, ubi, and ut with indicative. (77

Note that in this group antecedence of action is not as carefully indicated as in some other Latin constructions.

B. 287; A. 543; G. 561–563; H. 602.

2. Cum with indicative and subjunctive. (78)

Theoretically, in references to the past, the indicative is to be used when the temporal clause defines the time of the action of the verb of the main clause, e.g. '(It was) when I was walking down the street (that) I met him,' the subjunctive, on the other hand, being used in clauses that merely describe the circumstances of the action of the main clause. But in practice the subjunctive is the prevailing form, and it is often used where there is little descriptive force.

B. 288; A. 545-546; G. 580, 585; H. 600.

3. Antequam and priusquam with indicative and subjunctive. (79)

The use of the subjunctive indicates suspense on the part of the subject of the verb of the main clause; e.g. effugere cōnātus est, priusquam Rōmāni venīrent. The indicative is used of events regarded by the narrator as historical, or certain to come to pass; accordingly, the substitution of vērūnrum for venīrent in the above sentence would alter the meaning to 'before the Romans arrived, he made an effort to escape.'

B. 291 ff.; A. 550-551; G. 574-577; H. 605.

4. Dum, dōnec, and quoad with subjunctive. (80)

This mood is used when suspense or design is involved.

B. 293. III. 2; A. 553; G. 572; H. 603. II. 2.

IX. Indirect Discourse.

1. Infinitive and subject accusative. (81)

B. 314; A. 580; G. 650; H. 642.

2. Tenses of the infinitive. (82
B. 270; A. 584; G. 530; H. 617 ff.
3. Subjunctive in subordinate clauses. (83
B. 314; A. 580; G. 650; H. 643.
4. Conditional sentences in indirect discourse. (84
In the apodoses of contrary to fact conditional sentences the imperfect and the pluperfect subjunctive alike are represented by the form -ūrus fuisset.

PART II

CONNECTED DISCOURSE

SUMMARY OF THE EVENTS OF CATILINE'S LIFE.

B.C.

108. Birth.
82. Sulla's officer.
68. Praetor.
67. Governor of Africa.
66. Returned to Rome, and desired to stand for the consulship at a special late election. Was prevented from so doing by an impending suit for extortion in Africa. About December 5 helped to organize a plan (the First Conspiracy) to murder the successful candidates.
65. The plan (originally for January 1) was discovered, and postponed to February 5. It miscarried at this later date, and was given up. Catiline desired this year also to stand for the consulship, but was not acquitted on the extortion charge early enough.
64. Ran for the consulship against Cicero and others. About June 1 began to organize the Second Conspiracy, partly to help toward his election. Was defeated at the polls.
63. Brought to trial for murder committed under Sulla; was acquitted. Was again a candidate for the consulship. October 21, the dēcrētum ultimum passed. Catiline was again defeated at the polls. November 6, the meeting at Laeca's house. November 8, the first of Cicero's speeches against Catiline, the latter leaving the city that night to join Manlius. Military operations in Etruria.
62. Death near Pistoria.

THE STORY OF CATILINE.

EXERCISE 33.

Lucius Sergius Catiline was born in the year 108 B.C.,¹ of a patrician family. While still a young man he was a partisan² of Sulla, and had a hand in³ the proscriptions of that time. It is said,⁴ too, that he murdered his own⁵ son, and that he committed many other crimes in private life.⁶ These⁷ stories the two Ciceros, Marcus and Quintus, willingly circulated, and they did not⁸ hesitate to blacken his character⁹ as much as possible. Indeed,¹⁰ Quintus took pains to¹¹ publish evil reports about Catiline at the time his brother was running for¹² the consulship, hoping¹³ that in this way he would aid him and injure Catiline.

¹ The consuls of this year were Ser. Sulpicius Galba and M. Aurelius Scaurus. If the full names are used, omit connective.

² satelles. ³ adiutor esse.

⁴ Use verb personally; B. 332; A. 582; G. 528; H. 611.

⁵ Express 'own' by the position of the pronoun.

⁶ Use privātus.

⁷ Begin the sentence with a relative.

⁸ Unite the negative with the connective; B. 341. 1. d and 2. d; A. 328; G. 480; H. 656. 4 and 5.

⁹ mōrēs infāmēs facere; infinitive or quīn-clause? Cf. Introd. 87.

¹⁰ quīn etiam.

¹¹ Use assiduē. ¹² petere.

¹³ The nominative of the present participle is to be sparingly used; A. 492. N.; cf. G. 585. R.; H. 640. 5.

EXERCISE 34.

But even Catiline's enemies are forced to admit that he was not altogether bad. He was a good speaker and a person¹ of great physical² strength, enduring³ hunger, cold, and⁴ loss of sleep⁵ marvelously well.⁶ Moreover, he knew all the ways of approaching⁷ men, and was able to retain their friendship; in fact,⁸ Cicero himself says that he once thought him a good citizen. Being by nature ambitious,⁹ Catiline early sought public office. In 68¹⁰ he was praetor,¹¹ and, in the following year, governor of¹² Africa. On returning to Rome in 66¹³ he learned that ambassadors had preceded him to complain about his actions¹⁴ in Africa—a thing¹⁵ which prevented him from standing for¹⁶ the consulship that year.

¹ Omit.² Use corpus.³ See Exercise 33, n. 13.⁴ Three or more coördinate words or phrases most often have simply -que with the last.⁵ vigiliae.⁶ mīrum in modum.⁷ 'way of approaching,' aditus.⁸ quā etiam.⁹ glōriæ avidus.¹⁰ Consuls were L. Caecilius Metellus and Q. Marcius Rex.¹¹ praetūram ingredi.¹² prōpraetor obtinēre.¹³ Consuls, M'. Aemilius Lepidus and L. Volcatius Tullus.¹⁴ Make this a relative clause (dē eīs quae, etc.).¹⁵ Incorporate the appositive in the relative clause; B. 251. 4. b; A. 307. e; G. 616. 2; cf. H. 399. 6.¹⁶ petere.

EXERCISE 35.

To be sure, he had arrived too late to¹ be a candidate² at the regular election, even had the Africans entered no complaint.³ But the consuls elect, Sulla and Autronius, were convicted of bribery,⁴ and so a new⁵ election was held. It was⁶ at this that⁶ Catiline hoped to be a candidate. Disappointed in this⁷ hope,⁸ he made a plan with Autronius, Gnaeus Piso, and⁹ certain others to murder, on January 1, Torquatus and Cotta, who were declared consuls at this last election, and who would¹⁰ enter upon the duties of office¹¹ on that date.¹² The conspiracy was discovered, and the plan was postponed until February 5, when not only the consuls, but many of the senators were to be killed.¹³

² competitor.

³ nihil queri.

⁴ ambitus.

⁵ Use adverb denuō.

⁶ Express by emphatic position of the demonstrative.

¹⁰ Active periphrastic.

¹¹ magistrātum inire.

¹² diēs.

¹³ Lit. they were preparing to kill.

EXERCISE 36.

Cicero says that on the appointed day the conspirators began ¹ to gather, but that Catiline gave the signal before everything was ready. There are some, however, who think that Caesar² was the one appointed ³ to give the signal, and that he would have done so, had he not noticed that Crassus was missing. Whether Catiline gave the signal too soon, or whether Caesar feared to give ⁴ it ⁵ because of the absence of Crassus,⁶ is very uncertain.⁷ But at any rate ⁸ this plan, which ⁹ Cicero calls "the earlier conspiracy," was unsuccessful. Meanwhile Catiline's trial for extortion had not yet taken place¹⁰—a circumstance¹¹ which prevented his standing for the consulship in 65,¹² just ⁵ as it had done¹³ the year before.¹⁴

¹⁰ Lit. Catiline was still a defendant on a charge of extortion (dē rēbus repetundīs reus).

¹¹ rēs.

¹² Consuls, L. Aurelius Cotta and L. Manlius Torquatus.

¹³ Repeat the verb of the preceding clause.

¹⁴ proximus.

EXERCISE 37.

It is worth¹ noting that, though Catiline was beyond doubt guilty, Cicero was undecided² whether or not³ to undertake his defence⁴ on the charge of extortion. Either⁵ at that time he did not realize what sort of man Catiline was, or he was willing to defend him in order to⁶ secure his support⁷; yet it cannot be proved that he did undertake the case.⁸ However, Catiline was acquitted, and both he and Cicero were candidates for the consulship in the year 64.⁹ About June 1 Catiline began to sound¹⁰ men individually, and a little later brought together all those whom he thought ripe for¹¹ revolution. When these had assembled, he delivered a speech¹² in which he tried to persuade them that,¹³ if he should be elected¹⁴ consul, he would carry things with a high hand¹⁵ and confer many benefits upon them.

EXERCISE 38.

He further assured them that his plans would be supported¹ by Gnaeus Piso in Spain and by Publius Sittius Nucerinus in Africa, and that he hoped to have as his colleague Gaius Antonius, a man in sympathy with² his designs and deeply in³ debt. When the speech was finished, they all promised to work hard for⁴ Catiline's election, and swore that they would not divulge what they had heard; it is even said⁵ that, in order to make the oath more binding,⁶ they partook of⁷ blood mixed with wine. Quintus Curius, one of the conspirators, could not, however, control his tongue, but⁸ disclosed all to his mistress, Fulvia. Through her⁹ the matter came to Cicero's ears,¹⁰ and great fear fell upon¹¹ all good citizens.

¹ Use adiuvāre. What are the peculiarities of the future passive infinitive?

² Use favēre.

³ Use oppressus.

⁴ māximam operam dare (ut).

⁸ atque.

⁹ Cf. Exercise 33, n. 7.

¹⁰ Lit. was reported to C.

¹¹ Passive of inicare.

EXERCISE 39.

As a result of¹ this report a more stringent² law against³ bribery was proposed,⁴ so that Catiline might not dare to buy votes. Shortly before the election, along with others, Cicero advocated⁵ this law in a speech called In Togā Candidā. The greater part of this is lost, but we learn from Asconius, who has preserved some fragments,⁶ that in it Cicero assailed Catiline and Antonius bitterly, and that they replied in like strain,⁷ calling attention⁸ to the fact⁹ that he was a novus homō. The nobles, it is true, for this very reason¹⁰ had little sympathy with Cicero, but they were afraid of Catiline. So, when the election was held, Cicero was declared consul unanimously,¹¹ his colleague however being Antonius, the above-mentioned¹² friend of Catiline.

¹ Make ablative absolute by adding divulgātus; or use the preposition ex simply.

EXERCISE 40.

From Catiline's defeat¹ one could judge² how greatly he was feared; for it is said that both Caesar and Crassus worked hard for his election. And though the conspiracy was for the time being checked, the danger was still imminent,³ because one of the consuls for the coming year⁴ was in sympathy with the conspirators. But Antonius was persuaded by Cicero to spare⁵ the state on condition that⁶ he should have as⁷ his⁷ province Macedonia, which the lot had assigned⁸ to Cicero himself; for Antonius was anxious to gain wealth, and Macedonia was a rich province. In exchange for⁹ it Cicero received Antonius' province of Cisalpine Gaul; but even this he did not¹⁰ retain, giving it over subsequently¹¹ to Metellus Celer because, as he said,¹² he did not wish to leave Rome at the end of his consulship.

EXERCISE 41.

In 63¹ Catiline's opponents brought him to trial on a charge of murder,² which he was said³ to have committed in the times of Sulla. But he was acquitted, and, being not at all discouraged by previous failures,⁴ decided to run for the consulship again this year. If elected, he purposed as⁵ consul elect to fulfil at once the promises⁶ made to the conspirators, hoping⁷ to be able⁸ to persuade Antonius that it was to his advantage⁹ to disregard the pledge¹⁰ given to Cicero and to aid his former friends. But it seems that that consul, now that he had been given Macedonia, had little sympathy¹¹ with the conspiracy; so that¹² Catiline's hope was probably¹³ groundless.¹⁴ Meanwhile, Cicero was kept informed of all his plans, and protected his own life with a guard of friends and clients.

¹¹ minimē favēre.

¹² igitur.

¹³ Use vērī simile esse.

¹⁴ vānus.

EXERCISE 42.

Though Cicero had as yet no direct evidence against¹ the conspirators, he thought the danger so grave that he induced the senate to postpone the election, and to meet on that day to consider the situation² more³ carefully. When the senate was convened at that time, Cicero addressed Catiline, bidding him clear⁴ himself if he could. He, as usual unabashed,⁵ proclaimed that he was the leader of the popular party, and that he would not⁶ fail the people if they needed his services. The senate, though startled, did not pass a severe decree, despite the fact that,⁷ a few days before, when Cato threatened Catiline with a lawsuit,⁸ the latter had declared that they⁹ would rue it, if he were in any way¹⁰ injured.

EXERCISE 43.

Meanwhile Manlius, an ally of Catiline, had gone to Faesulae in Etruria,¹ and was there gathering an army to aid him. It was now arranged² that Manlius should make an armed demonstration³ on October 27, while⁴ at Rome Catiline should kill his competitors and Cicero on election day,⁵ in case he was not chosen consul. A rumor about the doings⁶ in Etruria became current⁷ in the city, and many citizens received anonymous⁸ letters warning them to flee to the country. So when, on October 21, Cicero arose in the senate and announced what would take place⁹ in a few days, the dēcrētum ultimum was passed, enjoining it¹⁰ upon the consuls to see that the state suffered no injury.

EXERCISE 44.

On the day of the election,¹ Cicero went down to the Campus Martius wearing² a coat of mail³ under his toga. This he did, not because⁴ he thought that it would protect him, but because he wished all good citizens to realize the danger. Silanus and Murena were elected consuls, and Catiline found it impossible⁵ to carry out his plan. Manlius, however, made a demonstration on the appointed day, and it was announced that forces were gathering in other parts of Italy, and that slaves were rising.⁶ The senate, fearing⁷ that the towns of Italy would not be able to check the disorder,⁸ sent officers and forces to various points, promising rewards to those who should give information⁹ about the conspiracy.

But though the conspirators were so many,¹ no one could be induced² to give information to the senate. On the night¹ of November 6, Catiline slipped away from² the house of Marcus Marcellus to meet with the other³ conspirators at the home of Marcus Laeca. Catiline was almost ready⁴ to leave the city and join Manlius, and so there was much business to be transacted at this meeting; and, most⁵ important of all,⁶ since Catiline said that he was unwilling to leave the city while Cicero was alive,⁷ two Roman knights, Gaius Cornelius and Lucius Vargunteius, agreed to call upon Cicero at early dawn and, when admitted to greet him, to kill him in his bed. The meeting, it seems,⁸ broke up too late for⁹ them to carry out the plan that night, and it was accordingly postponed until¹⁰ the following night.

Cicero says that the meeting was hardly dismissed when the news was carried to him. When the men arrived, they found closed doors; and, after they had gone away in anger,⁴ Cicero convened⁵ the senate in⁶ the temple⁷ of Jupiter Stator. As¹ he was taking his seat,² the other senators did not hesitate to show their fear by leaving the nearest benches empty. Then Cicero arose and delivered against him a speech which was afterward written out and preserved. At its close³ Catiline tried to reply, but the senators shouted "traitor"⁴ and "murderer," and he rushed forth from the senate house, leaving the city that very night. As he journeyed⁵ he sent back letters to influential men, to the effect⁶ that he was going into exile at Marseilles,⁷ that he had done no wrong,⁸ and that he would not⁹ have gone, had he not feared that the commonwealth would suffer some harm¹⁰ if he stood his ground.¹¹

As soon as Cicero learned that Catiline had left the city, he sent messengers to warn the municipalities that¹ the latter had taken up arms. On the next day he assembled the citizens at Rome, telling them that the man they had so greatly feared had departed at last. Though Catiline had written to many prominent men that he was going into exile, there was no one who did not doubt the truth of this.² For Quintus Catulus read in the senate a letter of very different purport,³ which he said had been sent to him by Catiline, to the effect⁴ that he (Catiline) had been forced to take up arms, because he had not been allowed to have in the state the honors which he deserved.⁵

As a matter of fact,¹ Catiline in a few days reached Manlius at Faesulae, having on the way taken the insignia of a consul and gathered forces on every hand. The senate thereupon declared Catiline and Manlius enemies of the state,² and directed Antonius to take the field³ against them, Cicero being put in charge of the city. At this same time there were unimportant⁴ disturbances in various parts of Italy, but these were checked without difficulty. At Rome, Lentulus and the other conspirators were planning to burn and murder on the Saturnalia—a time⁵ at which they expected that Catiline would approach the city with an army to help them.

Meanwhile ambassadors of the Allobroges came to town, sent, as they said, because their citizens were being injured by Romans. Thinking¹ that these Gauls would be very² useful allies if they could be persuaded to assist the conspirators, Lentulus sent Publius Umbrenus, who was a freedman and had once³ been a trader⁴ in Gaul, to interview⁵ them. The Gauls were easily persuaded that it was to their interest to cast in their lot with⁶ Lentulus, and Umbrenus then conducted them to the house⁷ of Decimus Brutus, who happened⁸ to be away from the city at that time, and whose wife Sempronia was in sympathy with the conspirators. The latter, feeling⁸ that at last he had the opportunity for which he had long been waiting, urged the Gauls to approach as many as possible,⁹ pretending¹⁰ that they were friends, and to secure a sworn statement¹¹ from them. When the letters were brought out, the conspirators at first attempted to deny all, and Lentulus actually⁵ asked the ambassadors what business he had ever had⁶ with them. On December 5 the senate met to consider what punishment was to be inflicted upon the conspirators,¹ and Decimus Junius Silanus, consul elect, was first² asked his opinion.³ He declared that he thought the men deserved⁴ the severest punishment, meaning thereby⁵ that they ought to be executed. Though many assented to this view,⁶ Nero urged⁷ that no action be taken⁸ on that day, because, as he said, there was not sufficient force at hand⁹ to carry out the senate's decrees. He also¹ argued that exile was a severer punishment than death; for, he said,² death brings an end of misery. Finally, he declared that, if Cicero and the senate should put the conspirators to death without a trial, they would regret it later; that there was no danger while men like Cicero held the consulship, but that at some time, with this precedent,³ an unprincipled consul might⁴ renew the proscriptions of Sulla. He therefore proposed that⁵ the goods of the conspirators be confiscated and that the men should be guarded in various cities throughout⁶ Italy. At about this same time a certain Lucius Tarquinius was brought into the senate, claiming¹ that he had been sent by Crassus to encourage Catiline, and to tell² him not to be downcast³ because the other conspirators had been caught. Meanwhile at Rome, as I have above mentioned, many were charged with being implicated¹ in the conspiracy, and some of them went into exile. But there still remained² in the city a disorderly element³ which Cicero regarded as⁴ in sympathy with Catiline's plans. In his speeches subsequently⁵ delivered he oftens refers to⁶ them, using⁷ the same designations⁸ once applied to Catiline and his allies. As a matter of fact,⁹ this very element showed hostility¹⁰ to Cicero a little later when Clodius came forward¹¹ as its leader. Whether or not¹² Catiline's conspiracy was very dangerous¹³ is a question¹⁴ still undecided¹⁵; but Cicero did not hesitate everywhere¹⁶ to claim that, in¹⁷ suppressing it, he had saved the state.
